

MEANINGFULLY CONNECTED

Message from UFVAA's Board Chair

What a standout year it's been! As Chair of the UFV Alumni Association (UFVAA) and celebrating my first year in this role alongside the launch of the UFVAA strategic plan, I'm filled with enthusiasm.

This year is particularly special as UFV embarks on its 50th anniversary year — a monumental testament to the university's enduring impact and its role in nurturing global citizens.

Undoubtedly, the highlight of our year is the initiation of the 50 Remarkable Alumni campaign. This initiative is our tribute to the extraordinary lives and achievements of our alumni, featuring stories of passion, innovation, and resilience that epitomize the spirit of UFV. These profiles not only celebrate our alumni's success but also serve as inspiration for the entire UFV community.

Reflecting on the past year, it's clear that our journey was profoundly shaped by the strategic pillars outlined in the UFVAA strategic plan — engagement, advocacy, philanthropy,

Long before Canada was formed, the Stó:lō (People of the River) occupied the land on which UFV is located. They speak Halq'eméylem, also known as the Upriver dialect. The UFV Alumni Association recognizes and honours the contribution that Indigenous people have made — and continue to make — to our community.

governance, and alumni stewardship. We have embraced these pillars, steering our efforts towards cultivating a rich and active alumni network that thrives on mutual support, lifelong learning, and collective growth.

Our focus has been to enrich the alumni experience through diverse opportunities for engagement — fostering a community where every member feels valued, connected, and empowered. From casual mentorship events to strategic partnerships, our initiatives are designed to enhance personal and professional development and amplify the positive impact of our alumni.

As we beam with pride over UFV's golden jubilee, we look forward to the stories yet to be told through our 50 Remarkable Alumni campaign. Together, these narratives will weave a vibrant tapestry showcasing the breadth and depth of our alumni's contributions across the Fraser Valley and across the globe.

To our newest graduates, welcome to this incredible community. The road ahead is laden with potential for innovation, compassion, and leadership. We are here to support you, cheer you on, and celebrate every milestone along your journey.

In closing, my deepest thanks go out to each of you for your unwavering commitment and vibrant energy that continue to propel the UFVAA forward. Here's to another year of meaningful connections, remarkable achievements, and shared success.

Dr. Joanne MacLean

UFV PRESIDENT AND VICE-CHANCELLOR

FIFTY YEARS FORWARD >

The UFV Alumni Association is an important partner in UFV's mission to engage learners, transform lives, and build community. As I reflect on UFV's past 50 years, celebrate today's achievements, and anticipate the exciting milestones ahead, I am honoured to share a few of our collective successes with you, our valued alumni community.

UFV's campuses continue to see significant and exciting new development that will better serve our students, faculty, and community. Mission campus renovations ($8 million) will complete this spring with the space having been reimaged to support educational programming focused on children, youth, and families. Growth on the Abbotsford campus has begun with an expansion of the student dining hall ($20 million) and a new student housing facility ($105 million) that will triple our capacity to offer a full on-campus experience to students. Consultations for the Chilliwack Campus Master Plan are underway, and I eagerly anticipate our progress in 2024–25.

In early 2024, the UFVAA Board was instrumental in the selection process of the university's next Chancellor, and I am deeply grateful for this collaboration. Dr. Jo-ann Archibald Q'um Q'um Xiim, esteemed scholar, member of the Soowahlie First Nation, recipient of an Honorary Degree from UFV, and member of the Order of Canada, began her term as UFV's fourth Chancellor on April 1, 2024.

As we embark on celebrating UFV's 50th anniversary, I am filled with appreciation for the pivotal role our alumni have played in shaping our university's legacy. Your ongoing support, generosity, and commitment to excellence have been instrumental in building a vibrant community where students are empowered to thrive and futures are transformed.

I am confident our alumni will continue to be our greatest ambassadors, inspiring generations of learners to pursue their passions and make a difference in the world. Thank you for your unwavering support, and here's to another fifty years of excellence in delivering educational opportunities for students, innovation for the communities we serve, and community building at the University of the Fraser Valley.

Message from UFV's Vice-President, Community Engagement

As we gather reflections for this year's UFVAA annual report, I am filled with gratitude for the invaluable partnership between the University of the Fraser Valley and its dedicated alumni community. Your support, commitment, and active engagement have shaped UFV's identity and fosters a vibrant culture of collaboration and excellence.

This past year brought remarkable achievements that carry the spirit of our university's mission. Among these highlights, bringing Convocation back to the Abbotsford campus last year stands out, with the Student Union Building as a fitting backdrop for Alumni Celebration Plaza, recognizing graduates' significant academic achievement. Additionally, reaching the milestone of our 50,000th alum crossing the stage was a testament to the enduring impact of UFV's education on individuals and communities.

Dr. Eric Gerbrandt (BSc '09)

Dedicated to creating and caring for a better berry, Dr. Eric Gerbrandt's research takes him from the fields of his Yarrow farm to labs and conferences around the world.

Eric has been leading the BC berry research portfolio as the as Research Director with the BC Blueberry Council, Raspberry Industry Development Council and BC Strawberry Grower's Association since 2018, while owning and operating Sky Blue Horticulture — his living laboratory for developing the most efficient production practices and identifying the most desirable fruits possible through horticultural research and variety trials. He doesn't operate alone, connecting with other growers and scientists in Ontario, Quebec, and Nova Scotia to form the first Canadian Berry Trial Network.

With deep roots in UFV's Agriculture Technology department, Eric started with UFV when it was still known as UCFV and was among the first graduates of the newly named UFV in 2009. He was the convocation speaker for his class, winning NSERC's Alexander Graham Bell Canada Graduate Scholarship which launched his degree at the University of Saskatchewan, where he was named an esteemed NSERC Vanier Scholar.

Building on his undergraduate studies at UFV, Eric returned during his PhD studies with the University of Saskatchewan to conduct field-based research and collaborate with UFV's biology and agriculture departments. Until 2019, Eric also honed his teaching skills as a sessional instructor in agriculture at UFV, providing a platform for him to impart knowledge and give back to the community.

Eric's dedication extends beyond the laboratory and field, encompassing outreach and extension work. Recognizing the industry's diverse grower population, he has tirelessly built relationships and worked alongside the community.

"UFV gave me so many opportunities," Eric says.

"Not only did I get to collaborate with UFV professors in my research as a graduate student, but I got exposed to a lot of field-based agriculture during my time in the Agriculture Technology diploma and that's really where I got my passion to do what I'm doing now."

Eryn Braley (BSc '19)

UFV Alumni are doing incredible work at home and around the world.

Both awards recognize and celebrate the accomplishments of exceptional alumni, emphasizing the hard work of our alumni across all ages and careers.

Do you know an alum doing great things?

UFV students, faculty, staff, board members, alumni or members of the community are all welcome to nominate candidates for the Distinguished Alumni Awards.

Eryn Braley is thankful to have chosen a career in Indigenous public health that allows her to connect with her Indigenous identity.

“I am so appreciative of the Indigenous mentors and peers that have guided me in my career and personal journey. Through teachings, connection, and ceremonies, I am connecting with who I am as nehiyaw iskwew, a Cree woman.”

In recognition of her dedication and innovation in ensuring Indigenous Peoples are heard and respected within the health care system in British Columbia, Eryn (BSc '19) is the 2023 recipient of the UFV Young Distinguished Alumni award.

Eryn, a member of the Saddle Lake Cree Nation, is passionate about embedding anti-racism and cultural safety, truth and reconciliation, and Indigenous rights within the health system.

“Anti-Indigenous racism is pervasive within the healthcare system, at both structural and interpersonal levels. My career path is allowing me to make a difference in the health and wellness journeys of Indigenous Peoples by ensuring the accessibility and availability of culturally safe and racism-free health care,” she says.

Eryn joined the Office of the Provincial Health Officer as the inaugural Manager for Indigenous Health Research and Writing, before moving to a new role as a program manager for Indigenous health at the Provincial Health Services Authority.

While a master's student, Eryn focused on a project aimed at helping UBC's School of Population and Public Health provide a safe environment for all Indigenous Peoples.

Outside of her main job, Eryn is a facilitator with the UBC 23/24 Indigenous Cultural Safety program, and is an avid member of the Indigenous women outdoors community. She has had continued success in research with the Cedar Project, a community-based cohort study addressing HIV- and HCV-related vulnerabilities in young Indigenous people who use substances in Vancouver and Prince George.

OUTSTANDING STUDENT LEADER AWARD RECIPIENT

Alec Zinman, BA Student

Like many new post-secondary students, Alec Zinman was a bit shy and overwhelmed when he first enrolled at UFV.

But he chose to be brave and get involved in student activities, which led to a number of roles — both paid and volunteer — within the Student Affairs portfolio at UFV.

And like many students who overcome their hesitation about getting involved, he now extolls the benefits of doing so. His core message? Do it!

"I believe that university is about so much more than just education, it's about the experience," he says. "Being a university student is a transitional period in people's lives in which they learn about themselves and their life goals. Being engaged with the campus and the community is crucial to getting the most out of this transitional period. I want to help create a campus experience that is warm, welcoming, and inspires students to be the best version of themselves they can be."

For his dedication to helping other students thrive at UFV, Alec is a 2023 recipient of the Outstanding Student Leader award.

Alec started post-secondary in his home province of Quebec but struggled with French. After a visit to a sibling out west, he decided to move to BC.

"In my first year I did not know many people initially. But after attending a clubs information day, I found many students who shared my interest in board and card games. Thanks to an active campus community, I was able to find folks with common interests. This is part of what motivated me to want to help create community for others."

"My advice to students is to take the chance to get involved and find your passions."

He joined the Pen and Paper tabletop games club and then served as president. He started working for UFV Student Life, helping with clubs and associations.

He also worked for the Student Wellness Centre (formerly the Peer Resource and Leadership Centre) for a number of years, providing peer support, information, and referrals to UFV students in areas such as mental health, students in distress, and suicidal ideation.

Alec worked with UFV's food bank as an assistant, and played a key role in helping to launch a gift card program when the food bank service had to adapt to the COVID 19 pandemic.

He has been featured in campus tour videos and volunteered at student orientation events, among many other activities.

"I've developed a passion for helping others find connection. My experience working and volunteering in the student experience area helped me find and refine my skill set and provided opportunities for growth. I was really inspired and influenced by Hilary Rowe and Sheila McKay in Student Affairs. They helped me to identify my strengths and develop my skills."

FIFTY YEARS FORWARD

Fifty years ago, the community came together to create Fraser Valley College — a place and space for everyone to learn and grow.

Over the years, FVC, which later evolved into the University College of the Fraser Valley and eventually the university we know today, has undergone significant transformation. Yet, amidst these changes, much has remained constant: our values of integrity, excellence, and of course, community.

On April 4, UFV kicked off a year full of recognition and celebration to commemorate its founding. The ceremony took place simultaneously at UFV's Abbotsford, Chilliwack, Hope, and Mission campuses, connected by live broadcast.

50 Remarkable Alumni

UFV has grown 50,000+ alumni strong since 1974. During our 50th anniversary year, we will be celebrating 50 remarkable alumni and their enduring impact on both local and global communities.

Alumni Wine

Special thanks to our 2023 alumni wine label artist

For Danielle Deschamps (Cert ABT '15), painting with watercolours is an escape into paradise.

"I'll put on some music, maybe have a glass of wine, and paint. It's a great way to escape from all my worries for a while," she notes.

Danielle has honed her craft under the guidance of a close friend with whom she paints.

"I was always artistic and had worked as a seamstress. I always loved to create things," she recalls. "I watched my friend doing watercolour and was fascinated with what you can do with just water and pigment. She taught me to design what I want to paint and then to fill it in with watercolour. I loved it from the start!"

Now Danielle's art is gracing the labels of the 2023 alumni wine.

She finds inspiration in the natural beauty of British Columbia, and enjoys sharing her passion with other artists and continues to study watercolour at workshops. The flowers featured in the paintings on this year's labels are white roses and apple blossoms, which she saw on a trip to White Rock.

Danielle graduated from the UFV Applied Business Technology certificate program in 2015 and it set her on course for a rewarding career in support positions at the university. She currently works as the assistant on the Assessment Services team.

"I'm so proud to be a UFV alumna," she notes.

"I didn't have the chance to get an education when I was younger and I started in the ABT program at age 53. I was crying when I graduated, when I finally got to put on that grad cap. I was working in factories since the age of 15, and then raising kids and grandkids. I recommend the program to so many people, especially women who are looking for a career after raising their families."

As for having her paintings chosen for the wine labels?

"It is a great privilege and honour to show my art in this way, and to represent UFV as an alumna," she says. "Without the education I received here I would not be where I am today."

SAVOUR THE VALLEY. SUPPORT STUDENTS.

Our remarkable journey from Fraser Valley College to University of the Fraser Valley has been inspired by the spirit of the community.

The UFV Alumni Association is dedicating this year's wine to the community that helped make this institution a reality, as well as to UFV's more than 50,000 alumni.

Since 2005, the Alumni Association has partnered with local wineries for its annual alumni wine program. Proceeds from the program support the UFV Alumni Association's bursary fund to benefit UFV students. Order your box of 6 bottles and receive free delivery to home addresses in the Lower Mainland.
